Former Frankfort Pastor Passes Away In Danville

Rev. Otto F. Frey, former pastor of the Frankfort Methodist church died last Wednesday at 12:50 p. m., at his home in Danville, Illinois following a month's illness. He was in a state of coma for several days.

F. B. I. MEN PICK UP SEVERAL TINLEY MEN

The serious and critical times in which we are living behooves every one to be careful of what statements they make. This was rather forcibly demonstrated Tuesday of this week when two residents of Tinley Park were picked up by FBI men for questioning. A doubt was raised as to whether they were aliens or full fledged citizens of this country. It is understood that these men had made remarks relative to the present war situation which cast suspicion on them. What the outcome has been of the questioning has not been revealed so far.

Mokena Music Students Present Own Compositions

Mokena has some very fine outstanding musical students as was demonstrated last Sunday afternoon when they appeared in a musical recital in the Richards Street Methodist church in Joliet. They are students of Mrs. Esther Davies.

What was especially outstanding about the program was that many of the compositions were composed by the Mokena students, both lyrics and music. The offerings were all very good and received hearty applause from the large and appreciative audience.

This is the first time that Mokena music students have played their own compositions in recital.

Those playing in the recital were: Rita Werner, Donna Bueschel, Marion Meyers, Joyce Werner, Chae Bender, Charlotte Myers, Elaine Spiess, Hobart Myers, Ruth Shevlin, Steward Shoop, Doris Spiess, Dorothy Kohl, Leigh Krapp, Anita Geuther, Ursula and Gunter Thiel all of Mokena.

The action arose out of an accident in which their car was struck by a bus operated by the company on March 28 last year a short distance west of New Lenox on Lincoln highway. FORMER RESIDENT OF FRANKFORT FOUND DEAD

Apparently a victim of asphyxiation, Albert Pfaff, a former Frankfort man and also one time resident of New Lenox, aged 55 years, and residing at 357 First avenue in Joliet, was discovered dead on the floor in his home late Monday afternoon.

Mrs. Pfaff who arrived home at 5 o'clock that afternoon found the body. She summoned police and firemen and the fire department respirator squad responded.

In a vain attempt to revive the victim, firemen worked for half an hour before Dr. Samuel Bergen who had been summoned, arrived and pronounced Pfaff dead. Pfaff had been dead for two hours he said.

Mrs. Pfaff told police that her husband had been working with his brother Fred Pfaff building a gasoline station. Three burners of a gas stove were still burning when she arrived home and discovered her husband's body, she said.

Apparently, the three burners of the stove used up all the oxygen in the small room, where Pfaff had been sleeping on a davenport, according to police, and the victim, without waking up, slowly suffocated from lack of oxygen to breathe.

Besides the widow, Pfaff is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Howard Johnson a son Lloyd Pfaff of Mobile, Ala., two brothers Chas. of Frankfort, and Fred of Joliet; a sister, Mrs. Geo. Uttermark, of Berwick, Pa; and three grandchildren.

The funeral was held at 1:30 o'clock Wednesday afternoon from the Harris Funeral Home, 20 South Eastern avenue, with burial in Pleasant Hill cemetery, Frankfort.

U. S. to Observe 150th Birthday of 'Bill of Rights'

WASHINGTON. — While armies are engaged in the death struggle to determine whether the democratic ideal or totalitarianism ultimately is to rule Europe and Asia, the American people are preparing to observe the 150th anniversary of the Magna Charta of their liberties—the Bill of Rights.

The Office of Civilian Defense, at the request of Archibald MacLeish, librarian of congress, through its state and local defense councils throughout the land, and with the collaboration of national, state and local agencies, will lead the nation's observance of "Bill of Rights day" on December 15. As requested in a joint resolution of the senate and the house of representatives, President Roosevelt's proclamation fixing that day as the one on which the whole nation pays its respect to the source of its liberties—gives the event special significance.

In schools throughout the United States there will be exhibits demonstrating the participation of the school in the observance of the anniversary. Local celebrations are to be under the auspices of the local defense councils and will demonstrate that the ceremonies in commemoration of the Freedoms guaranteed under the bill of rights, could be achieved only in a free society. The Library of Congress is preparing a syllabus telling of the origin of the Bill of Rights, defining the liberties it guarantees and contrasting the position of the American people with those of the occupied countries which once were democracies, as well as those in the totalitarian states.

Special Program Outlined.

Director F. H. LaGuardia of the Office of Civilian Defense has suggested that each local defense council initiate formation of Information committees, to get the facts about the total defense program; to develop local interpretation of the facts to make them more meaningful; to develop locally programs and campaigns important to defense, and to provide speakers on defense subjects for local organizations.

In his statement requesting the collaboration of the Office of Civilian Defense and local defense councils Mr. MacLeish said:

"The precise event signalized by these ceremonies will be the ratification of the Bill of Rights by the State of Virginia, whereby the assent of the necessary three-fourths of the States was secured; and whereby it became a part of the Constitution.

"The Constitution, written at the Federal convention in the summer

George Mason, the "Father of the Bill of Rights." Living in his home, Gunston Hall, only five miles below the home of his friend George Washington, he wrote the Virginia Bill of Rights and was largely responsible for the drafting of the national Bill of Rights.

of 1787, did not contain a specific declaration of individual rights. In the opinion of the delegates such a declaration was unnecessary; it would either reaffirm rights already existing, or it would merely prohibit the national government from interfering with them. Nevertheless, when the draft was submitted for adoption, it was discovered that many shared the view of Mr. Jefferson that "a bill of rights is what the people are entitled to against every government on earth, general or particular; and what no just government should refuse, or rest on inference." Massachusetts, Virginia, New York and other states ratified the Constitution, but with the recommendation that a Bill of Rights be added. This recommendation was accepted by the first congress in the form of 12 proposed amendments, which were passed on September 25, 1789. Of these, 10 were declared ratified on December 15, 1791.

"They relate to (1) the freedom of religion, speech, and the press; (2) the right to establish state militia; (3) the quartering of troops in private houses; (4) the security of persons against unwarrantable searches and seizures; (5) capital crime; (6) criminal prosecutions; (7) trial by jury in common-law cases, (8) bail, fines and punishments, (9) the relations of constitutional and "natural" rights; and (10) the powers reserved to the states. They are today retained in our American nature."

Occupation of Dutch Guiana Strengthens Defense Bases

The picture shows one of the bauxite mines on the Surinam river which will be guarded by U. S. troops. Occupation of Dutch Guiana is now taking place, following the conclusion of an agreement with the Netherlands government and Brazil. Bauxite from these mines provides a large percentage of the aluminum needed for national defense.

NEW YORK.—As United States troops begin the occupation of Dutch Guiana, with the consent of the Netherlands government in exile and the co-operation of Brazil and Argentina, a question arises as to whether there is more to this new move to strengthen our hemisphere defenses than the protection of the rich bauxite deposits located along the Surinam river.

For the occupation of Dutch Guiana, like the occupation of Iceland and the acquisition of naval bases from Britain, fits into the plan to strengthen the links in the chain of defenses we have built to protect ourselves against the invasion of both men and propaganda. The invasion of men is still regarded by most people as only a remote possibility; the invasion of propaganda is already accepted as an accomplished fact.

Natal, lying to the south and east of Paramaribo, the capital and seaport of Dutch Guiana, and 1,620 miles from Dakar, is the South American terminus of the Italian airline, Lati, which is known to carry Nazi propaganda materials. French Guiana, to the east of Dutch Guiana, has never repudiated its allegiance to the Vichy government.

At the moment, French Guiana needs and wants the economic benefits of American trade. And the presence of additional troops will be a moral as well as a physical support to our own troops stationed in British Guiana and a further assurance that we are on the alert. The occupation of Dutch Guiana can hardly be considered as an unfriendly act toward either French Guiana or Martinique, and we are not likely to have any interest in occupying either unless the Vichy government turns over everything to the Nazis.

African Events Important.

There is no evidence of any immediate danger of that, although the removal of General Weyand from his African command indicates an effort toward greater co-operation between Vichy and the Nazis. And if the British gain substantial French territory in Africa, the Nazis may put enough pressure on the Vichy government to bring it about. The existence of such a possibility is indicated by our promise of aid to the Free French forces in Africa under the terms of the lend-lease act, and such help may bring it about by giving the British and Free French an additional advantage. How much this advantage will amount to remains to be seen.

Christmas Trees Pay for College

ITHACA, N. Y. — Home-grown Christmas trees and boys hired as "sandwich men" to advertise them have helped a former New York state 4-H club member to finance his college education at Cornell university.

The sale of Christmas trees takes care of half the expenses of Gene Hanson, now a sophomore at the New York state college of agriculture. In the past three seasons he has harvested trees, which sold for $456, from his plantation started nine years ago. This December another $75 will go into his till.

Gene credits his success to a local market near his home, to satisfied customers who come back year after year and pay fancy prices for extra-special trees; and to advertising, including the "sandwich man" stunt at basketball games in which he played. He also points out that his trees were set on good land and were cultivated the first two years.

4-H Club Start.

The youthful forester got his start in the spring of 1932 as a 4-H club member. Through his club agent, co-operating with the state conservation department, Gene received free 1,000 trees which he set out three feet apart in good soil. Half the transplants he planted were four-year-old Scotch pine, and the other 500 trees were three-year-old Norway spruce. Because of this close spacing, it was necessary to move a number of the trees as the side branches closed in, but 800 trees survived.

The Japanese are known to have an interest in the Dutch East Indies, and capture of those islands by the Japanese would have a diplomatic, and probably a demoralizing effect on Dutch Guiana. More important, however, would be a Japanese move to draw our attention into the Pacific, leaving the West Indies and the Panama canal open to attack from the south or east. Attack from land or sea would probably be a long time in coming, but attack from the air could be swift and terribly destructive. Puerto Rico, with well-equipped Boringen field, serves as a look-out point. And our defenses in Dutch Guiana will place strong emphasis on anti-aircraft protection.

The fact that even a strong air base in Dutch Guiana would be, for the moment at least, of little more than defensive value, seems to indicate that defense is the immediate object of our occupation of Dutch Guiana. And that, of course, indicates that there is something there to defend, namely the bauxite mines.

It is undoubtedly important for us to protect the Surinam mines. Probably as much as 60 per cent of the bauxite used in the United States comes from Dutch Guiana. While we have deposits in this country, principally in Arkansas, Alabama, and Georgia, according to figures issued by the bureau of mines for 1939 (the latest available) our total production of bauxite for that year was only 375,301 tons, and four or five tons of bauxite are required to produce one ton of metallic aluminum. The Arkansas mines, the most productive in this country, apparently reached their maximum capacity in 1918.

Controls Rich Deposits.

Although aluminum is one of the most plentiful elements, it is found only in ores, from which it can be extracted only with considerable difficulty and expense. Bauxite, one of these ores, is acknowledged to be the best source of alumina, the aluminum oxide from which the metallic aluminum is extracted. Bauxite is found in most countries of the world, but the richest deposits have been found in Europe and in North and South America. Hitler now has access to the best of the European deposits, those in France, Hungary, Yugoslavia, Greece and Italy. The deposits in southern France, with those in the southern part of the United States, have yielded the largest total amount of bauxite.

While Germany has, perhaps, led the way, we have also been experimenting with other sources of alumina and with substitutes for aluminum. John H. Walthall, a research chemist for the Tennessee Valley authority, has developed a method for producing alumina from common clay, and in 1940 a pilot plant at the Muscle Shoals laboratory was turning out a ton of alumina daily.

Magnesium, aluminum's strongest commercial competitor, has met with firm opposition from the army because of its weaknesses, such as its susceptibility to corrosion. However, experiments have demonstrated that it can be made, by alloying, nearly as strong as aluminum, and it has the advantage of being about a third lighter.

Bauxite shipments recently have accounted for two-thirds of Surinam's exports. Sugar, bananas, rice, coffee, hard woods, rum, and molasses are the other leading products, coming chiefly from the lowlands near the 240-mile Atlantic coast. Much of this area is below sea level and has to be diked and artificially drained. Gold once was the principal mineral product, but the accessible deposits have been quite thoroughly worked.

The conquest of the Netherlands by Germany in 1940 lessened Surinam's ties with the mother land and increased her commercial relationships with the United States. Air service is maintained between the country and the United States.

Almost five times as large as the Netherlands, Surinam is about the size of Arkansas, North Carolina, or Iowa. Its history is intertwined with that of the United States, for in 1667 the British traded the South American colony, which they then owned, for New Amsterdam, where New York city now stands.

U. S. Silence on Sinking of U-boats Is Explained . . . 'Little Fellow' Still Has Tough Going in Defense Program.

WASHINGTON.—What might be called an official explanation of why this government—and the British government—pursue the policy of not announcing the sinking of any submarine has just been made by none other than Charles Michelson. What is much more interesting than the explanation is the possibility of interpreting the explanation as admitting that our navy has sunk Nazi U-boats.

"Some comment has been made," says Mr. Michelson, "on the President's notice that, when and if German submarines are destroyed there would be no announcement of the events.

"There have been reports, originating from letters to their home folks from men of the patrol fleet, that they had caught U-boats. One referred to two subs destroyed by his vessel. Why, the question is asked, should not the American people be advised that all the losses have not been on our side?

"It is deemed more important that the Germans should not have this information than that our natural curiosity should be gratified. A raiding submarine is ordered to a particular traffic lane to intercept convoys. If that U-boat were knocked off, another would be sent to lie in wait in that ambush. Ultimately, of course, the Reich, getting no word from the raider, will surmise that she is lost, but before that information is conclusive, one or more convoys fleets may have passed the danger point in safety from attack. Even a few days or a week is of value in this situation.

"That, and the psychological effect of suspense and doubt—not an inconsiderable factor in a war of nerves—explains the riddle."

But the explanation as to why announcements of submarine sinkings are so meager is not quite adequate. Obviously the United States government is following the practice of the British in this respect. The British did the same thing in the last war, and seemed to think, then and now, that it was wise strategy.

'Little Fellow' Has Tough Going

Another blast in behalf of the "little fellows" in manufacturing has just been issued by Sen. James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania. So much has been written and spoken about the necessity of getting all the little shops of the country bound into the defense drive, and therefore kept in operation, that it might be well to point out some of the outstanding reasons why the program to do precisely that has bogged down. For "bogged down" it has, beyond the slightest doubt.

Senator Davis views the situation from many angles; not the least interesting is that ordinary business must carry the tax load. It makes very little difference, really, what the profits of the manufacturers who are producing for national defense are. If they are small, they can be disregarded. But if they are large very few "spending dollars" will find their way into the pockets of the owners.

The corporation income tax will take pretty nearly the first third, the excess profits tax will take another chunk, and the terrific personal income taxes, those already enacted and those to come, will take three-fourths or more of what is left—assuming that the gentlemen in question have sizable incomes.

One way of looking at this is that if the government pays low prices for defense products, there is nothing to worry about, but if it pays high prices it will get all the cream, or most of it, back.

So we can almost disregard what we might call the defense industries in this problem of taxation, and look at what industries are left. It is these non-defense industries which will pay most of the government's revenue. As more and more of them are being curtailed because, not being defense industries, they cannot get the materials they need, this becomes a serious problem, and obviously will force a larger and larger percentage of the total defense cost to be financed by borrowing.

Small Plants Important

The other angle is that the defense effort should be much greater, and one way to make it greater is to bring more of the small plants into defense production.

The difficulty here is a problem almost as old as human nature. Your big contractor is assailed for not subcontracting more. It is assumed that he wants to keep all the gravy for himself, instead of passing it around. This is not the main reason because the more subcontracting he can do the more total business he can do. A lot of subcontracting, instead of cutting down the amount of his earnings, might actually increase them.

A CHRISTMAS EVE STORY
By Elizabeth Alden
(McClure Syndicate—WNU Service.)

DAVIE stood at the camp window and looked out over the great frozen lake. "Do you think he'll come right across the ice?"

"He?" Mother answered from the kitchen. "Oh, Santa Claus? Why, perhaps, darling. But not this morning, funny boy; not before evening."

Such unquestioning five-year-old faith, and she must watch its betrayal. Because there weren't going to be any presents. There wasn't any money.

Suddenly Davie screamed with excitement and his mother went running to look out too.

"Why, it's a deer, Davie."

"Reindeer," said Davie, without any question at all.

"One of Santa's, you think? Maybe the sleigh tipped over and all the presents spilled! Isn't that too bad?" They watched the graceful creature until it disappeared into the woods on the other side. Then mother returned to her baking and Davie followed.

"It's a shame for it to happen just the day before Christmas when there won't be time to make any more. How disappointed all the children in the world will be! But you won't mind so much, will you, Davie darling, because you'll know what happened. Just think, you saw the deer! And wasn't he beautiful?"

Two small blobs appeared far out against the snow.

"Yes," Davie drew a long sigh of rapturous memory. He felt silent, then: "May I go out and play?"

The eleven o'clock sun was warm and she bundled him out.

Suddenly it was one o'clock and time for lunch. And she had heard no sound from Davie for an hour!

No answer when she called from the door. Davie wasn't in the yard. Of course he had gone to find the sleigh, the tipped-over sleigh and the presents. How could she have failed to consider the way a child's mind would work?

She dared not leave the baby, who had a slight cold, nor start out with her on a search which might last for hours. Nothing to do, then, but wait for Jock to come in midafternoon.

It was three o'clock before a small blob appeared far out against the snow. Two small blobs, in fact. She waited, sobbing with relief.

"I didn't find Santa Claus' sleigh, Mama," he explained as soon as he could speak for her kisses, "but I found his house. She lives there—and that was one of his reindeer. The tracks went right into the yard. Santa Claus was gone. There was just a man asleep in the kitchen. I think he's one of the toy-makers."

"No, that was Ned," said Goldilocks.

"What's your name, dear?"

"Phyllis."

As the afternoon wore on something familiar about the contour of the little face kept tickling her memory until realization struck. Golden curls and a blue zipper suit! Phyllis! Ned—Ned Cozetti? Of course. This was the Bentley child. Phyllis Bentley, kidnapped Thanksgiving day and given up for dead! Jock, bending to unlace his snowshoes, was met by a whirlwind bundled to its ears in shawls and surrounded by three miniature whirlwinds similarly wrapped.

"Crank up the car right away. We've got to get into town before the telegraph office closes. Do you know who this child is?" The whirlwind gave a bounce and grasped his arm. "Phyllis Bentley, that's all. And her mother thinks she's dead and this is Christmas eve. Oh, hurry! Davie was gone three hours today and I know just how she must feel. And if we get hauled up for driving without a license, there'll be ten thousand dollars to pay the fine!"

Toys for Little Tots Can Be 'Noise-Makers'

Children from one to four years of age like noise-makers. For them we might suggest a set of a half a dozen baking powder tins, each with something in it to make a noise, as buttons, nails, paper clips, pebbles or screws. Since some of the contents might be easily swallowed, the tops should be firmly cemented on before the tins are given two or three coats of enamel paint, each can a different bright color.

Santa's Troubles

Our mechanized age certainly puts Santa at a disadvantage, because his reindeer never had troubles like this. Several inches of snow prove too much for his modern carriage, so Santa Claus has to wield a snow shovel in front of a New York store to free it. (Editor's note: Wonder what he does at the North pole where the snow is really deep.)

Christmas Marked In Early Colonies By Jollity, Feasting

Early American colonies along the Atlantic seaboard could have been located on different continents, so far as their Christmas celebrations were concerned.

Many of the customs of England were followed by the southern colonies of Georgia, Carolina, Maryland and Virginia. Here the Christmas season was a holiday in the true sense of the word. Feasting and merrymaking were common, but religious worship and prayer were not forgotten.

In sharp contrast to this happy celebration was the manner in which Christmas was marked in New England. Puritan leaders did their best to create a different conception of the day. Celebrations were declared pagan in origin, and it was believed such rites were out of keeping with the true spirit of the day. Their efforts were overcome after a number of years and New England yuletides gradually assumed a character more like those of old England.

Christmas in the middle colonies of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware was celebrated in the manner that the colonists followed in their countries of origin. In addition to England, these colonies were populated by people from Germany, Holland and Sweden. The Germans, for example, brought to America the custom of using the Christmas tree, but the Quakers of Philadelphia limited their observance to religious ceremonies.

Family reunions marked the season in both the middle and southern colonies. Houses were crowded with welcome guests who were treated to the best of fowls, wines and sweetmeats.

Along the frontier Christmas was a season of active merrymaking which in places verged on rowdiness.

As time went on, Christmas in the various sections of the colonies became fused until there is today a considerable similarity of practices throughout the United States.

St. Nicholas Loved For Piety, Grace

The name of Santa Claus is merely slurring the Dutch San Nicholas, which is, of course, Saint Nicholas. American children are probably the only ones who say it exactly that way.

Nicholas was an actual person. He was Bishop of Myra, in Lycia, Asia Minor, in the first part of the Fourth century, A. D. He was also the youngest bishop in the history of the church.

From the day of his birth Nicholas revealed his piety and grace. He refused on fast days to take the natural nourishment of a child.

But Nicholas was not a barefoot recluse vowed to poverty. His father was a wealthy merchant, and his riches enabled him to be a dispenser of the good things in life.

The feast of Saint Nicholas was originally celebrated on December 6. Later when church people in the late Middle ages tried to suppress the festivities which grew up around the Boy Saint's day, his festival came to be associated with Christmas day.

Christmas Celebrated in 98

Tradition says that Christmas was first celebrated in A. D. 98. It was ordered to be held as a solemn feast by Pope Telephorus in A. D. 137. There is no record of any commemoration during the life of Christ.

About A. D. 340, St. Cyril made careful investigation as to the actual date of Christ's birth and reported December 25 as the most nearly correct date. Pope Julius accepted this and established the feast of Christmas on this date, which was followed by every nation in Christendom.

DEEP WATER ISLAND

by ALAN LEMAY

W-N-U-RELEASE

INSTALLMENT TWO

THE STORY SO FAR: Karen Waterson, San Francisco girl, convinced by her lawyer, John Colt, that she has a claim to the island estate of her grandfather, Garrett Waterson, arrives in Honolulu to attempt to gain control of the property. One evening while she and Colt are dining and discussing plans for pressing her claims, Richard Wayne, or Tonga Dick, as he is known, enters their dining place. He is a member of the Wayne family that has been in control of her grandfather's island, Alakoa, since the old man's disappearance. Inasmuch as Karen believes that Tonga Dick does not know her identity she suggests to Colt that she talk to him and learn what she can. Colt at first opposes the idea but begins to change his mind.

Now continue with the story.

"I suppose there isn't any really practical objection," he said; "but isn't this notion just slightly on the silly side? You can hardly expect—"

He started to say something more, but let it pass; then bowed with exasperating courtesy, and walked away.

When he was gone she sat quietly a little while, trying to relax. Presently she turned her chair a little so that she could look into the shadows where Tonga Dick sat, three tables away, alone in the obscurity of palm shadows. She still could not clearly see his face, but she focussed upon the coal of his cigarette, and waited. She let her eyes rest there almost to the limit of endurance; then smiled faintly, and returned her attention to the dance floor.

Tonga Dick stood up, wound his way to her table. He laid a hand on the back of the chair where John Colt had sat.

"May I?" "Perhaps, if you wish."

Richard Wayne sat down, crossed his knees comfortably, and took his time about lighting a cigarette. Karen waited, determined to make him lead the way; but she watched him curiously, with a sharp interest that was partly caused by his name alone. In the world she knew, you could no more be called Tonga Dick, in seriousness, than you could be called Red-Handed Harry, or Terrible Pete. Had she had no other relationship to this man than that of a casual tourist, she still would have stared, just because of the name he was called.

Tonga Dick surveyed her slowly, with grave eyes. "You wanted to see me?"

Richard Wayne watched with admiration the perfect serenity of Karen's poise as she turned a little, and coolly met his eye.

She was much more interesting to look at from across a table, he decided, than from across a number of them. Yet he had noticed her in the first moment in which he had stepped upon the lanai. That, of course, was the reason he knew who she was. He had landed but a few hours before, and had no more than shaken hands with his brothers; there were no means by which he could have identified Karen Waterson, if he had not noticed her and been interested in his own accord.

From the shadows of his obscure table at the edge of the lanai he had watched her for some time for no other reason than that it gave him pleasure to look at her.

After a little while he had signaled a table captain and asked who the girl was—and had obtained a correct answer.

Knowing who she was, it was odd to be sitting at the same table with her now. This was the girl who had come here from the mainland to lay claim to the island of Alakoa, the little stronghold in the sea which no one but a Wayne had held for more than two decades.

It seemed to him that Karen Waterson did not look the part. He couldn't understand how anyone with a face like that, and eyes like that, could get herself hooked up with a shenanigan that differed from a common swindle only in the boldness of its scope.

"If I hadn't wanted you here," she said, "you'd hardly be here, would you?"

"And so?"

"So nothing. I wanted you to come and sit here because I think you look romantic. And I think you might introduce yourself, now."

"My name is Richard Wayne," he said. "I belong here in the Islands. More specifically, I am connected with a small privately owned island called Alakoa."

He watched for her reaction, and was fooled again; for no reaction came.

"That certainly is very interesting," Karen Waterson said. "I wish I were an Islander."

"Perhaps," he suggested, "you would like to tell me who you are."

"My name," Karen improvised, "is Katie Higgins—something—a white girl from about four miles south of Dubuque. I teach school some place, and I think I would like to get in the movies."

"I should have said," Dick commented, "that you were from San Francisco." She glanced at him sharply, but he added, "Hawaii is a kind of a crossroads; people from every part of the world come through here, sooner or later, so that if you live in the Islands you get to recognize inflections of speech."

"Oh."

"They raise very good looking girls in San Francisco," Dick said.

"It must be a wonderful thing to own your own island," Karen said.

He laid a hand on the back of the chair where John Colt had sat. "May I?" "Perhaps, if you wish."

"Are many islands privately owned?"

"Only a few, in this part of the Pacific. Niihau is privately owned, and so is Lanai, which is the sixth largest in the group; and the Waynes have had Alakoa for about twenty years."

"How many Waynes are there?"

Richard Wayne said to himself, "You know cockeyed well, young lady, how many Waynes there are." But aloud he said, "Four. My uncle, who is really the owner, my two brothers, and myself."

"It's like owning a little empire of your own, isn't it? I can't think of anything nicer than that."

"A good many people seem to feel that way," Dick said. "That's what makes an island so hard to hold on to."

"You have trouble holding onto it?"

"Oh, yes, indeed. Just now, for example, there is an insufferable little snip of a girl trying to get her claws into Alakoa by due legal process."

"Interesting," Karen encouraged him. "And just how does she expect to do that?"

"The Waynes bought Alakoa from her grandfather. Now the girl wishes to prove that the sale was illegal, because, she says, her grandfather was a congenital idiot. She says it runs in the family, and she can prove it."

Karen studied him for a moment with veiled suspicion, but Tonga Dick's face was innocent. "What a remarkable person," Karen said. "What's she like?"

"Well—as I told you, I have had no chance to get acquainted with her."

"Maybe you'll have a chance later."

"I'd rather like to, you know," Dick admitted. "I'd like to find out what makes her tick. But I would hardly know how to go about it."

"Just a simple Island boy," Karen smiled.

"Well, the circumstances are a little awkward. I can't just go up to her and say, 'I understand you are the little twerp who is trying to get my island away from me, and what are you doing this evening after the store closes?' Or can I?"

"Well, invite her for a sail on your boat. Show her selected views of the coast line. Show her this island she's after—what did you say the name of it was? Alakoa? Probably she hasn't even seen it. I'll bet she'd be interested."

"And just what," said Dick, "would be my idea?"

"Get to know her. You said you wanted to find out what the little fright was like. Maybe you'd like her."

"And then what?"

"And then what?" Karen repeated. "Say, wait a minute. Do I have to map out your entire life?"

They grinned at each other; and either one of them would have given a good deal to know what the other was thinking then.

"It's a rotten plan," Dick criticized.

"Now you've hurt my feelings," Karen said. "Here I practically work up a headache planning a beautiful day for you, and what credit do I get? You tell me it's rotten. All that effort wasted!"

Richard Wayne appeared to brighten. "No, it isn't. It gives me a much better idea. What's the use of wasting the whole program on a chiseling little frump? No! I'll take you sailing, instead."

"Me? Oh, I'm afraid I couldn't—"

"Tomorrow morning," Richard Wayne prompted her, "at something like nine?"

"Something more like ten," she answered.

CHAPTER II

It was nearly midnight when Richard Wayne called upon his brothers. They had been expecting him earlier in the evening, and only an objectionable message he had sent them by phone had kept them waiting for him at an hour strictly outside of their habits.

Richard's two brothers, Ernest Wayne and Willard Wayne, sat in a large room which, in spite of its prim order, showed the wear of the humid years. The whole thing managed a transplanted New England look; obviously nothing had been changed here for a long time.

The two brothers who here awaited Richard Wayne seemed to have been bred and raised by the New England furniture. Both were older than Richard, and when he looked at them he was sometimes happy to remember that they were only his half-brothers, after all.

"It does seem to me, Dick," Ernest Wayne said fretfully, "that you would show a little interest in what is happening here." Ernest, tall and thin, did not look entirely well; he wore gold-rimmed glasses, which did not seem to be strong enough for his purpose, and when kept up late he developed a peaked look.

Dick sighed and sat down. "If I weren't interested I wouldn't be in Honolulu at all," he said. "Now, please try not to get all excited, will you?"

"You don't realize the seriousness of the situation, Dick," Willard said heavily, without heat. "This thing is critical in the extreme—perhaps even desperate. Uncle Jim can't seem to understand that he is not invulnerable. He has delayed, and delayed—"

"As I understand it from your letters," he said now, "the complaint is that when our mutual father bought the island of Alakoa from Garrett Waterson he practically cheated the old boy out of his eye teeth—is that the story?"

"Father was an industrious and intelligent man," Ernest Wayne said with annoyance.

"Do you know anything much about the original swindle?"

"I object to your tone," Willard Wayne said; and Dick was astonished by the vigor of his brother's resentment. "Garrett Waterson was a disreputable old pirate. He was a waster and a speculator of the worst sort—absolutely typical of a certain kind of riffraff which troubled the Islands in the early days. If father saw values in Alakoa that Waterson did not, that certainly was Waterson's look-out. But now comes this girl, this grasping, piratical little adventuress, intent on seizing not only the whole of Alakoa, but all the development which has cost Uncle Jim the best years of his life, and—"

"Have you checked the identity of this girl?" Dick interrupted.

"She's Garrett Waterson's granddaughter, all right," Willard said.

"Well brought up?"

"The family has no distinction whatever. The girl has been working as a stenographer. Her relationship to the island of Alakoa probably would never have occurred to her as offering any possibilities, if it had not been for this John Colt."

"And who is this John Colt?"

"John Colt is thirty-six years old and was born in New York. He is one of the predatory speculators who came to light in the boom days of the late twenties. He acquired a considerable fortune through water developments in California. In 1932 his stock-juggling activities were investigated, but without success."

"You seem to have snooted around to very good effect," Tonga Dick complimented them.

"And now," Willard concluded, "Karen Waterson, through her attorneys, and undoubtedly acting on the advice and direction of John Colt is bringing suit, on the complaint that her grandfather's sale of Alakoa was illegal—that Garrett Waterson, at the time of the sale, was mentally incompetent. That shows you the girl's unscrupulous type—she is willing to discredit her own grandfather—prove him to have been virtually insane—to gain advantage for herself."

"Same old story," Tonga Dick murmured. "But not so easy, in the case of Garrett Waterson, I should think."

Willard Wayne exploded. "I tell you it is easy! Unless we find a way out, it is most certainly going to be done! This is what comes of dealing with irresponsibles of Garrett Waterson's type. Evidence can be brought in to show that Garrett Waterson was not only totally irresponsible, but eccentric in the extreme. I myself am convinced he was more or less deranged. Let me remind you that we've had hundreds of such cases in the Islands—mostly successful!"

CHRISTIAN STEWARDSHIP

LESSON TEXT—II Corinthians 8:1-9; 9:6, 7.

GOLDEN TEXT—It is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful.—I Corinthians 4:2.

The Christmas season, when there is so much thought about gifts, is a most appropriate time for a lesson on Christian giving. Dr. John Willis Baer was once asked: "How can we raise money for foreign missions?" Quick as a flash, he answered: "Don't raise it, give it." "If all believers could come to a true knowledge of what the New Testament teaches regarding giving, and would seriously put this knowledge into practice, the Christian church could advance more in the next 10 years than it has advanced in any 50 years in its history" (Wilbur M. Smith).

I. An Example of Liberality (8:1-5).

For some reason people are overly sensitive when one speaks of money. The subject must be approached tactfully, so Paul skillfully directs the attention of the Corinthian church to their fellow Christians in Macedonia. They had been in great affliction and were in "deep poverty" (v. 2), but out of their sorrow and want they gave far above Paul's expectation (v. 5) and "beyond their power," and then pleaded with Paul that he should let them give more. The explanation is found in verse 5, where we learn that they had first given "their own selves to the Lord," and then in loving co-operation with Paul himself, as the Lord's agent, in this matter of the offering.

Is it not strange that those who suffer most for the gospel and have the least to give are the most generous in their giving. Those to whom the gospel has come easily, who bear no special burdens for Christ, and who are well situated financially, are commonly the most stingy with their money. Could it be that they have not really given themselves to the Lord? One wonders.

II. An Exhortation to Faithfulness (8:6-9).

Apparently the Corinthians had made a promise or pledge to give for the poor at Jerusalem, but had become a bit forgetful and negligent. It seems to be so easy to neglect to keep up a pledge for the Lord's work. Some folk even feel that they cannot make a pledge. They pledge to pay their rent, to make payments on a car, or a washing machine; but to the church they just can't pledge, or if they do, the promise is often neglected. Such things are dishonoring to the name of Christ.

As they abound in other graces (v. 7), Paul exhorts the Corinthians to abound in "this grace also." So giving is a Christian grace! And why not? Consider Christ (v. 9), who left the glory He had with the Father and came to the poverty of the One who had not where to lay His head, that we through Him might be eternally rich.

Christian friend, when that truth lays hold of your heart and life your purse strings will loosen, your check book will open more easily, you will gladly give—for Christ's sake.

III. A Principle of Christian Giving (9:6).

The harvest is always in proportion to the sowing of the seed. The man who is stingy with his seed at sowing time will reap that kind of a harvest. The opposite is also true. It works in the field of business too. The merchant who gives the fullest return for one's money and the most liberal measure of service is bound to prosper, while the stingy one is left to lament the fact that his goods rot on his shelves.

In the spiritual realm it is even more true. But, someone may say, we ought not to do good that we may profit by it. No real Christian will give just that he may prosper, but, mark it well, if he does give for Christ's sake and His glory, God will prosper him. "You can't beat God giving."

IV. The Spirit of Christian Stewardship (9:7).

Our giving is to be done according to the purpose of our heart—not grudgingly, nor with grief, nor yet by compulsion, because someone put on pressure.

God loves a cheerful or (as it may be translated) hilarious giver. When done in the right spirit, giving for Christ can be one of the happiest experiences of the Christian life. Let's make offering time in our church services the most joyful time in the meeting. Then we shall be liberal as well as cheerful in this grace of stewardship.

Faith in Christ

"Martha said, 'Lord, if thou hadst been here, my brother had not died.' Of all the true disciples of Christ this may with perfect confidence be said, 'He is here, therefore they shall not die.' Faith causes Christ to be present in the heart; and where Christ is, eternal death cannot be."—Dean Howson.

Tinley School News

Organized rehearsals for the Christmas program have been started this week. The program itself, will be divided into two acts. The first act will be presented by grades 3 to 8 and will portray the formal side of Christmas, the actual Bible story with the tableaux depicting the various Christmas scenes with all of the children providing the Christmas songs and special music by the melody band and the glee club. The second act of the program will be presented by the 1st and 2nd grades and will depict the historical background of our American Christmas. Those customs in England, Sweden, France and Holland which had carried over and which had been combined into the American celebration of the children's Christmas will be the purpose of the 2nd act. The children will be dressed in the costumes of the countries and will enact those things which are carried on by the people of those countries.

The general public has been invited to attend this program since it is one of the gifts of the school to the people of the community.

The glee club is planning another gift to the community by gathering around the community Christmas tree Tuesday evening, December 23 to sing Christmas carols. Following they will do some special carolling in the homes of three or four shut ins in the community.

Modern education does not depend entirely upon text books and learning of factual material from books. Children of grade school age learn more readily by actually seeing the things about which they study, thus the motion picture is an important tool in their education. At the present time there are hundreds of films available to schools which help the children get a clearer insight into the school subjects. Another means of getting children to learn more quickly is through actual reproduction of things mentioned in text books. The field trip has long been recognized as an indispensable part of the school program. The value of visits to museums, industrial plants, etc. is reflected in the school room by better understanding, greater interest and more enthusiasm.

The 8th grade of the Tinley Park school is planning a two day trip to Springfield, Ill., some time in the spring. This trip will be by bus and the children will visit historical sites such as the grave of Ann Rutledge, New Salem and the capitol buildings in Springfield. As a preparation for this trip a good bit of reading will be done about the historical places that will be visited. The pupils have set up in their class room a savings bank and are carrying on those operations engaged in by a bank in establishing savings accounts. Although the trip is many months away the children are exhibiting a constant interest in the things they are to see and are especially proud of the money they bank in their own savings accounts. Provisions have been made for adequate supervision of both the girls and boys and the trip should be especially educational and enjoyable to each member of the class.

Other groups in the school have planned field trips during the year. These trips will be one day trips mostly to museums in Chicago. Fourth grade has made a trip to the post office in Tinley Park as part of their project work in study about United States postal system. Third grade has visited the Tinley Park Dairy and is planning a trip to a packing plant in the near future. These trips are in connection with their reading of "Centerville, A Modern Community."

The Chicago Historical Society, the Field Museum, the Planetarium, the Rosenwald Museum of Sciences and Industry, and the Art Institute will be visited by other groups in the school before the end of the school year.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Freitag and family and Miss Lois Wallin attended the Live Stock show in Chicago Saturday. They also toured one of the large slaughtering houses and found it very interesting.

Mrs. Roy Hannum entertained Miss Adeline Semmler at lunch Monday.

American Legion Auxiliary

The members of Tinley Park Unit 615 of the American Legion Auxiliary wish to thank all their friends who helped make their Service Fund Card and bunco party such a success. The proceeds will go to help elevate distress among ex-service veterans families in the community. May we again thank you.

The Juniors of the Auxiliary met at the home of Barbara Freitag Friday evening with Joy and Beverly Berg as hostesses. Plans were gotten under way for their "teen age" dance, to be held in the near future. They also started their scrap books, which will go to hospitalized children.

The Auxiliary will meet with Mrs. Swisher Friday evening for their regular business meeting.

With the program dedicated "To all who in the true spirit of Christmas may join their voices in the singing of carols," the annual Christmas concert given by the music department of Thornton Township high school and sponsored by the PTA will be presented Tuesday evening, December 16 at 8 o'clock.

Featuring a special Christmas stage setting, pantomime and art, the program will consist of Christmas music by the orchestra the acapella choir, the Girls Glee club and the Boys Glee club. A "carol sing" by the audience is planned for the close of the program.

Several students from Tinley Park are singing some with the Girls Glee Club, some with the Boys.

No admission will be charged, but the PTA will take a collection for the Student Aid fund. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

DEFENSE PRODUCTION GOING INTO HIGH GEAR

Typical of the speeding up of defense production and deliveries is the activity in these General Motors plants, from which machine guns, Allison liquid-cooled aircraft engines, and shells are being delivered in large quantities. These are only three of a myriad of important defense products being turned out in G.M. plants throughout the country.

WITH every manufacturing division of General Motors now engaged in supplying one or more defense materials, production and delivery of defense goods are being stepped up sharply week by week, according to a recent statement by Alfred P. Sloan, Jr., Chairman of the Corporation.

Sixty G.M. operating units are actually in production on defense goods, Mr. Sloan revealed, and already defense products totaling considerably in excess of $200,000,000 have been delivered on government contracts.

It was just about a year ago that General Motors received its first emergency defense contract from the Government. Within the year 14 new plants have been erected for defense production, or are in the process of being completed. Thirteen plant enlargements have been made and in 25 instances existing buildings have been re-equipped with machinery. Many thousands of men have been trained, or are now in training in the special skills of defense production.

As a sidelight on General Motors fulfillment of defense orders, a study of only 11 operating units reveals that parts and materials are being purchased from 200 communities in 21 states. One G.M. plant alone gets defense parts from 83 outside suppliers and raw materials from 37 others.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Ingraham of New Lenox were guests last Wednesday evening in the Alfred Sproat home.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald Miller are the parents of a son born December 4 in St. Joseph's hospital.

John Riley injured his hand last Saturday while working with his tractor.

Mr. and Mrs. James Ward of Berrien Springs, Mich., spent several days this week in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Richard Gorham.

Mr. and Mrs. Norman Armstrong and daughter June and son Warren and Daniel Lauffer of Joliet and Mrs. Geo. Peterson were dinner guests Sunday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Loren Sass.

MOVIE STAR JOINS U.S. NAVY

Ensign Wayne Morris Seeks Wings

Wayne Morris, recent star of "I Wanted Wings," became a member of Uncle Sam's Navy in May, 1941, when he was appointed to the rank of Ensign.

"When asked what he thought of the United States Navy," Morris said, "I think every man who is considering joining a military service should look into the 'chance of a lifetime' which the Navy and Naval Reserve offer to get into the big-pay field of the future—aviation. In the Navy you can attend the finest flight training schools in the world, and receive instruction from Navy pilots who introduced dive bombing, aircraft carriers and catapult take-offs to the rest of the world. Also, there are opportunities in Naval Aviation for men who don't want to fly. They can be trained as aviation machinists, metallurgists, photographers, observers, or they can receive instruction in many other trades. It's a great life in the Navy."

How to shop for gifts that go on giving ... year after year

THIS year above all, you say, you want the presents you give to be used—you want them to last... Well, here's the answer... Give electrical gifts. Their worth will increase as months go by.

Now meet an old hand at Christmas giving... he will show you how to shop for long-lived electrical gifts... Santa Claus!

Hello, there! Well, first thing to decide is how much you want to spend for each gift. Make a list of your favorite people—put a rough figure after each name—then come with me. We'll find the right electrical gift to fit each figure—

If you plan to spend up to $5

Does your friend like to drink good coffee? The vacuum coffee maker you give will go on pouring out good brews for years... and of course, everybody likes an electric clock for his own room, as well as other parts of the house... a pin-up lamp is the handiest thing for lighting up an odd corner...

If you plan to spend up to $10

Waffle irons last for years... you can get one that makes two waffles at a time, and stay in this price range!... Speaking of irons, the new flat irons are really something! They make ironing so easy... the right gift for any woman on your list who keeps house... or for a girl with a room at college... and don't forget—a handsome table lamp is always a welcome gift.

If you plan to spend up to $25

For people who take pride in serving snacks to their guests, a toaster with tray and service dishes is perfect... or you can give a complete electric roaster for this amount of money—something you'll be thanked for as long as you live! While we're thinking about the kitchen, don't forget that nothing adds more fun to cooking than an electric mixer... and does it save a lot of work! For someone you're particularly anxious to please—a beautiful floor or table lamp will bring years of pleasure.

And for your most important gifts

If you're an "unusual" giver, that wonderful new electric blanket is the gift you've been trying to think of... keeps people warm all night regardless of changing room temperatures, is light as a feather. Costs $36.23 complete with transformer and adjustable thermostat control switch. It's ideal for bedroom, sleeping porch or college dormitory.

And for a really big Christmas, an electric refrigerator, a washer or an electric sewing machine! I think an investment in the home shows a mighty smart bit of foresight this year.

Hope I've helped you fill out your list. Until Christmas Eve... Good-bye, and Good Shopping!

For more suggestions, stop in at your neighborhood dealer's or Public Service store. Don't put off shopping... do it now while selections are best.

... and Electricity is Cheap!

Items priced at $5 or more may be purchased on convenient terms.

Make Merry With Cookies and Candies!
(See Recipes Below)

Xmas Gift Boxes

Christmas is the time for giving! Thus runs the refrain during this festive season. And what could be more appropriate, more welcome than gaily wrapped boxes packed right in your own kitchen—boxes full of sweet, crunchy cookies warm and fresh from the oven, candies, tempting tidbits of sweetness made with spices and nuts.

Cookies and candies wrapped in waxed paper in small tin boxes will delight the heart of that boy you may have sent to camp, your daughter away at school, or a neighbor.

Bran Filled Hermits.
(Makes 45 medium-sized cookies)
¾ cup butter or margarine
1½ cups sugar
2 eggs
¾ cup milk
¾ cup all-bran
3½ cups flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
1½ teaspoons cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves
½ teaspoon mace
½ teaspoon nutmeg
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup mince-meat or preserves

Cream shortening, add sugar and eggs and beat well. Add milk and all-bran. Sift flour with remaining dry ingredients and add to first mixture. Mix well and chill. Roll dough to an eighth of an inch thickness on lightly floured board. Cut into rounds. Place 1 teaspoon mince-meat on one-half the rounds and top with remaining rounds. Crimp edges with a fork. Bake on ungreased cookie sheet in fairly hot oven (400 degrees) for 12 to 15 minutes.

Cookies right in tune with the Christmas season are these with red or green sugar dusted on them. Make them in fancy Christmas tree, Santa Claus or wreath shapes with a cookie cutter. Use butter for a really good flavor, cut them thin and chill well before cutting.

Christmas Butter Cookies.
(Makes 6 dozen small)
½ pound butter
1 cup sugar
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon almond extract
½ teaspoon salt
2 to 2½ cups flour

Cream butter and sugar. Combine beaten eggs and flavoring with creamed mixture. Add flour and salt. Mix well and chill. Roll thin, cut into shapes. Dust with colored sugar. Bake on a sheet about 15 minutes or until light brown, in a moderate (400 degrees) oven.

Make your cookie and candy boxes provocative with tiny squares of rich, delicious penuche. These pieces can be dressed up in individual wrappings of gold, silver, green or yellow gift paper.

LYNN SAYS:

Now is the time to make your selection of gifts: perhaps you'd like to give away some of that brightly colored jelly or jam you put up last fall. Wrap it in gay paper, and tie it with a bit of silver and blue ribbon. Bring out the fruit cake and plum pudding, someone will be mighty proud to have them, too.

When packing cookies and candies for gift boxes you can make the box more attractive by alternating the kinds of cookies and candies used. To assure freshness, use waxed paper between the layers.

Gift Box Suggestions

- *Bran Filled Hermits
- *Christmas Cookies
- *Brazilian Penuche
- *Popcorn Brittle
- *Popcorn Fudge
- *Recipes Given

Brazilian Penuche.
2 cups brown sugar (packed firmly)
¾ cup top milk
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 tablespoon butter
½ cup chopped Brazil nuts
Dash of salt

Combine sugar, salt and milk. Cook, stirring constantly over low heat until sugar is dissolved and mixture boils. Cook until a small amount forms a soft ball when dropped into cold water (238 degrees). Remove from heat. Add vanilla and butter without stirring. Cool until lukewarm and beat hard until creamy. Add nuts and turn into greased pan. Sprinkle with sliced nuts. Cut into squares.

An old favorite, popcorn, is featured in a new role in these candy recipes. If you don't want to go through the business of popping the corn yourself, you can get along nicely by using the popcorn that comes tightly sealed in tin cans. It's as fresh and nice as if you made it yourself.

Popcorn Fudge.
2 cups brown sugar
1 cup thin cream
1 tablespoon butter
2 cups popcorn
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine sugar with cream and stir over low heat until sugar is dissolved. Cook until the soft ball stage (238 degrees) or until it forms a soft ball in cold water. Remove from heat and let stand in cold water until cool. Add butter, popcorn, and vanilla. Beat until creamy. Pour into buttered plate and cut.

Popcorn Brittle.
2 cups granulated sugar
1 cup dark corn syrup
½ cup water
1 quart popcorn (slightly salted)
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 teaspoons soda

Cook sugar, syrup and water in a heavy skillet. Stir until sugar is dissolved, then boil until mixture will crackle when dropped into cold water. Remove from fire, add vanilla and popcorn. Add soda and mix well. Pour into shallow, buttered pan. When cold, break into pieces.

No Christmas box of cookies would be complete without the delicately flavored Swedish Sprits cookies:

Swedish Sprits.
(Makes 4 dozen)

1½ cups butter
1 cup sugar
1 egg yolk
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 teaspoon almond extract
¾ cups flour
¾ teaspoon baking powder

Cream butter and sugar thoroughly, add egg and flavorings. Beat well. Blend in dry ingredients until mixture is smooth. Press through cookie press into various shapes and decorate with candied fruit, if desired. Bake in a hot oven (400 degrees) 8 to 10 minutes.

Cookies hard to make? Not if you use this recipe:

Krispie Marshmallow Stars.
(Makes 16 to 18 stars)

½ cup butter
½ pound marshmallows
½ teaspoon vanilla
1 package oven-popped rice cereal
4 ounces semi-sweet chocolate, melted

Melt butter and marshmallows in double boiler. Add vanilla and chocolate and beat thoroughly. Put cereal in a large buttered bowl and pour in first mixture, stirring briskly. Put in a shallow buttered pan and allow to cool. Cut into stars or circles with a cutter. (Note: this cookie is not baked.)

THE TWITCHELLS

There is trouble in the home of the Elmer Twitchells.
Ceiling trouble.

Elmer is establishing ceilings. Not that there haven't been ceilings in the Twitchell residence. The issue just now is a different kind of ceiling. The Washington kind. The prevailing type.

Elmer is trying to put a ceiling on Mrs. Twitchell's hats, for instance. (We heard that crack about them being funny enough as is.) He wants the ceiling established at two hats per season, a drop of about eight. And he thinks there should be a price ceiling too; somewhere around $3.50.

Elmer is for a fur coat ceiling, too, but the crisis hasn't arisen this season, because Mrs. Twitchell got a new coat last winter. She got it wholesale at above twice what it would have cost elsewhere.

And he thinks there should be a ceiling on all the wife's expenditures. "I told her last night that there must be a ceiling on bridge losses," said Elmer today. "Every time she goes to one of them Tuesday Ladies Bridge parties she loses money on a pre-defence emergency level. Maybe the best way to solve this would be to put a ceiling on her bids."

He wants a ceiling on the wife's contributions to causes, also. "I am all for being charitable and fair," he explained, "and my heart is no mustard seed when it comes to reacting to the worthy appeals of today, and there has gotta be some limit. The old lady just subscribes to everything. Last week she put me down for $10 to the American Fund to Save Icelanders From American Army Slang. She ain't got no judgment. I've imposed a ceiling. Everything she subscribes above $4 a week is void."

"Me and the wife ain't speaking just now," confessed Mr. Twitchell. "Yeah, it's more ceiling trouble. Pin money ceiling. I used to give her $10 a week, but this is a time of crisis. The future is uncertain. Nobody can tell what may happen next in this world war. So I told her the new ceiling on pin money would be $7.50."

"What did she say?" we asked. "What didn't she say!" exclaimed Elmer.

"Did you explain inflation to her?" "No."

"Why not?"

"I don't even understand it myself," concluded Elmer.

R. Roelofs Jr. says he knows a man who is so rich he can afford to take the ladies for cocktails and dinner in the ladies' dining room at a man's club.

John Cudahy says that Hitler looked to him like a man with a malignant disease. He's a victim of geographical indigestion, hardening of the head and retarded mustache.

THE MENACE
The cops should paddle Henry Snipes. He drives a-straddle Highway stripes.

—Merrill Chilcote.

The Journal of the American Medical Association reports that experiments at Harvard prove that women suffer from cold and heat more than men because they do not dress as warmly. This makes the opinion unanimous and presumably official. C. P. Yaglou and Anne Messer who conducted the experiments had a group of men sit in an air-conditioned room in men's trousers and then change to women's lingerie. Then they had women go through a similar test. Nothing can convince us that the whole thing wasn't arranged by a couple of Yale men.

Washington, in its new tax proposals, may subscribe to the notion that it is impossible to get blood from a stone. But it thinks the idea is good.

THE SEASONS
Winter is an old dame
In a white lace cap;
Spring is a maid with folded hands
And flowers in her lap.

Summer is a golden queen
Wearing a jeweled crown;
And autumn is a gypsy
In a russet gown.

—Joan Maher.

Kipling Found His Anger Was Profitable—to Another

A bus driver once crashed his vehicle into one of the trees outside the home of Rudyard Kipling. The author wrote the man demanding reparation. The driver ignored the complaint and sold the letter to a friend for 10 shillings.

Not receiving an answer, Kipling penned another note threatening legal action. This scathing letter the driver also ignored—and sold.

Finally losing patience, Kipling called on the man and angrily demanded an explanation.

"I was hoping that you would write me some more letters. Selling them is most profitable," replied the man.

There's always a Cousin Joe from Kokomo on your Christmas list. You'd like to send him more than a card, but you can't afford an expensive gift. Send him a carton of cigarettes or a pound tin of smoking tobacco. The cost is moderate and it's a gift any smoker welcomes. More smokers prefer Camels than any other cigarette and, of the smoking tobaccos, the National Joy Smoke is Prince Albert. Local dealers are featuring gift-wrapped Camel cartons and a novel package of four "flat fifties." Today's popularity of Doan's Pills, after many years of world-wide use, surely must be accepted as evidence of the value of Doan's under exacting laboratory conditions. These physicians, too, approve every word of advertising you read, the objective of which is only to recommend Doan's Pills as a good diuretic treatment for disorders of the kidney function and for relief of the pain and worry it causes.

If more people were aware of how the kidneys must constantly remove waste that cannot stay in the blood without injury to health, there would be better understanding of why the whole body suffers when kidneys lag, and diuretic medication would be more often employed.

Burning, scanty or too frequent urination sometimes warn of disturbed kidney function. You may suffer nagging backache, persistent headache, attacks of dizziness, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes—feel weak, nervous, all played out.

Use Doan's Pills. It is better to rely on a medicine that has won world-wide acclaim than on something less favorably known. Ask your neighbor!

Town of T. B.

There is a small town in Maryland called T. B. The name is derived from the initials of a colonial settler, Thomas Brooke, who became an owner of several thousands of acres of land now included in the present town site, says Pathfinder. The Brooke boundary stones marked "T. B." were found within the township, and early residents started to call their town "T. B."
